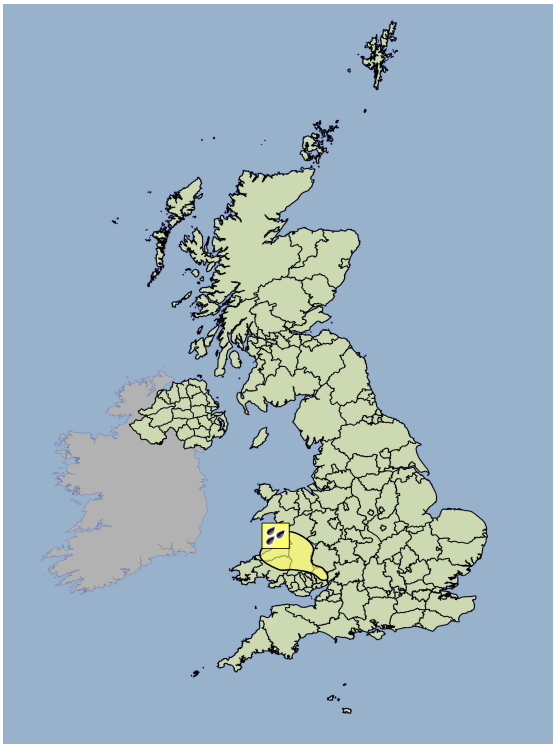
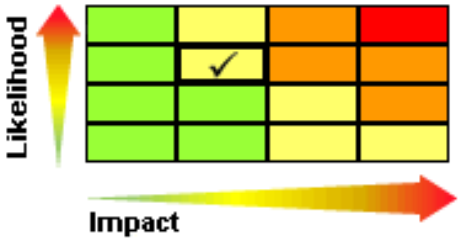
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Aligned bands of showers have already proved particularly active over parts of Wales; these look like lasting a few more hours and bring the risk of surface water flooding to some localities. As often in showery situations, some places will escape the worst of the rain.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 10:00 on Thu, 14th Aug 2014 until 14:00 on Thu, 14th Aug 2014

Heavy showers and thunderstorms will continue for the rest of the morning, before clearing to the east early this afternoon, with a much quieter end to the day in prospect. The public should be aware of the risk of localised flooding.
